Brave Boat Headwaters Around Town

Visit the Morgan Gallery in June and then keep your eye out around town in the coming months for images of Brave Boat Headwaters. The posters highlight The Headwaters as a connector, ensuring habitat for wildlife and clean water for Brave Boat Harbor, as well as providing opportunities for outdoor recreation and nature-based education.

Plugging into Nature in October

KLT is partnering with the Kittery Schools to make October Plugging into Nature month. Along with other events that month (see back calendar), please join us Sunday, October 25th, 2 - 5pm at The Star Theater for a panel discussion about our changing relationship with nature in our increasingly screen-focused lives, the role nature plays in our community and its benefits to our physical and emotional well being. During the discussion, there will be outdoor activities for kids with The White Pine Programs and The Center for Wildlife. And be sure to check out the event's displays to learn about the nature-based education happening in Kittery.

Progress on The Headwaters

The permanent protection in February of 43 acres of woodland and farm fields donated by the Coggeshall and Sawyer families is an exciting step forward for Brave Boat Headwaters, which when fully protected will be a 150-acre nature preserve.

Water “Otter” be Clean

Otters require areas with clean water, which make them an ideal mascot for Brave Boat Headwaters. When it's permanently protected, The Headwaters will safeguard 3 miles of streams that will benefit all wildlife and help ensure the water quality of Brave Boat Harbor.
